

14june - wash in time

Slept very well, and had to get a shower to wake up. My sly train trip was duly noted by the hostess of the B&B as they had gone to town and noted my car at the station car park !!!

So after brekky, I managed to film the train crossing the bridge, I headed down the road, and onto the station carpark. Time to do some posting, hope it gets through. Then did the washing, but the end time was 10 minutes before the train departed at 11.10am So I went off while the washing was on to buy tickets and have a look. The same loco was on that I saw yesterday.

back to the laundry. 16 minutes to go, and it took about 20 minutes, only 3 minutes before the train departed. So I did what any true gunzel would do plonked the washing into the bag I had and walked to the station. So Myself my two cameras and my washing went for a ride!!!! At the end of the line the loco crew were 'amused' with mu antics of filming with one camera, and taking still shots with the other at the same time !

After getting back I went back and put the washing in the dryer. While this was on I went back to the railway to look around more and buy some momentos. The model railway was old and tired, it had old facilities for animals at one end, empty. Never caught up with the manager who was to show me the remains of Dingo.....as I had to tear myself away for the trip South.

When the washing was dry I packed the car and headed off. The trip was another long 4-5 hour one. Buit again saw a lot of the countryside, and a decent suspension bridge I had to go over in the pouring rain. The rest of the trip was not raining, just at the bridge.

Found the B&B easily as I came into Seaton. The next highlight tomorrow is only 10 min away so will be a easy start Had a chickenberger & chips for tea, the chips were really good. Now, to sleep.....

vOnly 4 more days of the car and this internet dongle, So after Sunday night reports may be fewer than is now the case.
