

5 July

Well we were a bit too late to start the day off. Peter hoped to get the 12.30 ferry from Port Angeles to Victoria. But we were far too late and so got to the port 3 hours early for the 5.30 sailing. The ferry journey is also a border crossing, as Victoria is on Vancouver Island in Canada. We had plenty of time to catch some zzzz's and do some of this writeup.

The ferry turns up, we get loaded and off we sail. At the other end we're docking and customs as the lark was a border crossing into Canada. Ravi and myself got through after a few questions, but the Uhaul did not, they got the full hour or more inspection. But they did get through, and it was now a small drive before we found a motel for the night. A small walk to have tea, and then night and sleep.
